To the Right Honourable

P H I L I P,

EARL of CHESTERFIELD, &c.

Knight of the most Noble Order of the Garter.

MY LORD,

THAT you may be induced to read this dedication through, I shall begin by assuring you, that I do not intend to pay you one compliment. To praise you is unnecessary on all hands; to your Lordship, it is offensive; and for the public, they do not want to be informed of your character: it lives, at present, in the mouths of all men, and posterity will find it in the history of Europe.

My design, my Lord, is to express my own gratitude, not to delineate your merit. 'Twas your Lordship first took notice of me, in my original obscurity, whence you brought me into life, and have since continued to encourage me by your countenance and favour; and I cannot help confessing, that I have a kind of honest pride in having it known, that your Lordship thought me worthy to be taken under your protection.

These, my Lord, are the general obligations that I owe you, of which I have wished to raise some monument, that may remain as long as my name shall be remembered ; but I have more particular reasons for presenting you with this tragedy, as it was your Lordship first pointed out to me the subject, and when it was finished gave me the first assurance of its success, by your approbation. I could not therefore avoid taking advantage of this opportunity, to acknowledge, publicly, all these favours ; and to assure you, that I am

Your Lordship's most obliged,

Most obedient, and

Very humble servant,

HENRY JONES.

To

To Mr. HENRY JONES, on his Tragedy of the EARL of ESSEX.

AS antient heroes are renown'd in song,
For rescuing virtue from th' oppressor's wrong,
So shall thy fame, who snatch'd this well-wrought tale
From dullness' gloomy pow'r, o'er time prevail.

Long had these scenes, wound up with dext'rous art,
In spite of reason, gain'd upon the heart ;
Thaw'd ev'ry frozen fountain of the eye,
We wept, 'till even Sorrow's self was dry ;
Yet judgment scorn'd what passion had approv'd,
And the head wonder'd how the heart was mov'd.
But, with a fate revers'd, thy work shall boast,
That soundest judgments shall admire it most.
Cloath'd in the easy grandeur of thy lines,
The story brightens, as the diction shines.
Renew'd with vigour as in age 'tis grown,
The wond'ring scene sees beauties not its own.

Thus, worn with years, in Afric's sultry vales,
The crested snake shifts off his tarnish'd scales ;
Assumes fresh beauties, brighter than the old,
Of changing colours, intermix'd with gold :
Reburnish'd, basks beneath the scorching ray,
Shines with new glories in the face of day,
Darts fiercer lightning from his brandish'd tongue,
Rolls more sublime, and seems, at least, more young.

No more shall noise, and wild, bombastic rage,
Usurp th' applauding thunder of the stage ;
Fustian no more shall pass for true sublime,
Nor nonsense musically float in rhyme ;
Nor, in a worse extreme, shall creeping prose,
For nature and simplicity, impose :
By thee reform'd, each vicious taste shall fail,
And critic Justice hold aloft her scale.

Whence beams this dazzling lustre on thy mind ?
Whence this vast fund of knowledge in mankind,
Unletter'd genius ? Whence hast thou been taught,
This dignity of stile, this majesty of thought ;
This rapid fire, by cool correctness rul'd,
And every learned elegance, unschool'd ?

Say, hath great Shakespeare's transmigrated shade
 Inform'd thy mafs, or lent thee friendly aid?
 To him, bless'd bard, untaught, 'twas also giv'n,
 T' ascend, on native wings, invention's brightest Heaven,*

Affuming Phœbus' port; and in his train,
 The mufes all, like handmaids, not in vain,
 Crouch for employment.—

The passions too, iubſervient to his will,
 Attentive wait on his ſuperior ſkill;
 At the command of his enchanting art,
 Unlock the burſting flood-gates of the heart,
 And in the rapid, headlong ſtream, bear down
 The vanquish'd soul, and make it all his own.

Happy the clime, diſtinguiſh'd be the age,
 When genius ſhoots ſpontaneous for the ſtage;
 Not too luxuriant, nor too trimly neat,
 But, in loose wildneſs, negligently great.
 O may the gen'rous plants, fo wond'rous rare,
 Ne'er want the tender hand of foſt'ring care;
 But, like Apollo's fav'rite tree, be ſeen,
 For ever flouriſhing, for ever green.

M' NAMARA MORGAN.

* Alluding to the prologue to Henry V.

P R O L O G U E.

OUR desp'rate bard a bold excursion tries,
 Tho' danger damp'd his wings, he dar'd to rise :
 From hope, high rais'd, all glorious actions spring ;
 'Tis hence that heroes conquer, poets sing.
 Even he may feel the soul-exalting fire,
 Fame prompts the humblest bosom to aspire.

Without a guide this rash attempt he made,
 Without a clue from art, or learning's aid.
 He takes a theme where tend'rest passions glow,
 A theme, your grandfires felt with pleasing woe.
 Essex' sad tale he strives to cloath anew,
 And hopes to place it in a stronger view.

Poets, like painters, may, by equal law,
 The labour'd piece from different masters draw ;
 Perhaps improve the plan, add fire and grace,
 And strike th' impassion'd soul through all the face.
 How far our author has secur'd a claim
 To this exalted palm, this wish'd-for fame,
 Your generous sentiments will soon declare :
 Humanity is ever prone to spare.

'Twere baseness then your candour to distrust ;
 A British audience will, at least, be just.

A flattering truth he fearful must confess,
 His sanguine friends made promise of success ;
 But that, he fears, their ardent wishes wrought,
 Since partial favour seldom sees a fault.
 Then bear, like patient friends, this first essay,
 His next shall thank you in a nobler way.

SCENE, an Antichamber in the Palace.

Enter Burleigh and Raleigh.

BURLEIGH.

THE bill, at length, has pass'd opposing numbers,
Whilst crowds seditious clamour'd round the senate,

And headlong faction urg'd its force within.

Ral. It has, my lord.—The wish'd-for day is come,
When this proud idol of the people's hearts
Shall now no more be worshipp'd.—Essex falls..
My lord, the minute's near that shall unravel
The mystic schemes of this aspiring man.
Now Fortune, with officious hand, invites us
To her, and opens wide the gates of greatness,
The way to power. My heart exults ; I see,
I see, my lord, our utmost wish accomplish'd !
I see great Cecil shine without a rival,
And England bless him as her guardian saint.
Such potent instruments I have prepar'd,
As shall, with speed, o'erturn this hated man,
And dash him down, by proof invincible.

Bur. His day of glory now is set in night,
And all my anxious hopes, at last, are crown'd.
Those proofs against him, Raleigh—

Ral. All arrived.

Bur. Arrived ! how ? when ?

Ral. This very hour, my lord :
Nay more, a person comes, of high distinction,

To prove some secret treaties made by Essex,
With Scotland's monarch, and the proud Tyrone.

Bur. How say'ft? to prove 'em?

Ral. Ay, my lord, and back'd
With circumstances of a stronger nature.

It now appears, his secretary Cuff,
With Blunt and Lee, were deep concern'd in this Destructive scheme, contriv'd to raise this lord,
And ruin Cecil. O, it is a subtile,
A deep laid mischief, by the earl contriv'd,
In hour malignant, to o'erturn the state,
And (horror to conceive!) dethrone the queen.

Bur. These gladsome tidings fly beyond my hopes!
The queen will listen now, will now believe,
And trust the counsel of her faithful Burleigh.

‘ Let this most lucky circumstance be kept

‘ A secret still from public observation.—’

Dispose 'em well, till kind occasion calls
Their office forth, lest prying craft mean while
May tamper with their thoughts, and change their minds;
Let them, like batteries conceal'd, appear
At once, both to surprize and to destroy.

Ral. This sudden shock, my lord, this weighty stroke,
Must press him headlong down to deep destruction;
Indignant Fate marks out this dreaded man,
And fortune now has left him.

Bur. Thank the changeling;
His servile faction soon will stand aghast,
And sink, at distance, from his threat'ning fall.

Ral. His headstrong friend, the bold Southampton too,
Now finds his rash endeavours all defeated;
And storms at thee and the impeaching commons.

Bur. Let him rave on, and rage.—The lion in
The toils entangled, wastes his strength, and roars
In vain; his efforts but amuse me now.—

‘ Ral. What triumphs in my soul shall reign, to see
‘ This sanguine and o'erbearing man brought down.
‘ Beneath my envy; nay, below my scorn.
‘ How young ambition swells my rising hopes!
‘ ’Tis Heaven, O Cecil, calls thro' England's voice,
‘ And justice, bending from above, invites us.’

Enter Gentleman.

Gent. My lord, the lady Nottingham desires,
With much impatience, to attend your lordship.

Bur. What may the purport of her bus'ness be ?
Her tender wishes are to Essex ty'd
In love's soft fetters, and endearing bands :
‘ For him, each melting thought awakes desire,
‘ And all her soul is lavish'd on that lord,—
‘ This unexpected visit much surprizes me !
‘ What can it mean ? She would not come to pry
‘ And pick out tales for Essex' ear !—Why let her ;
‘ I'm arm'd secure against her arts and cunning.
‘ Besides, her errand comes too late ; for now
‘ Her minion's doom'd to fall.’—Conduct her in.

[Exit Gent.

And you, my Raleigh, watch Southampton's steps ;
With care observe each movement of his friends ;
That no advantage on that side be lost. [Exit Ral.
‘ Southampton's Essex' second self ; he shares
‘ His headlong councils, and adopts his schemes ;
‘ His daring heart, and bold, ungovern'd tongue,
‘ Are both enlisted in the rash designs
‘ Of this proud lord, nor knows a will but his :
‘ A limb so fix'd must with the body fall.’

Enter Lady Nottingham.

Not. Thrice hail to rescu'd England's guiding genius !
His country's guardian, and his queen's defence.
Great Burleigh, thou whose patriot bosom beats
With Albion's glory and Eliza's fame ;
Who shield'st her person, and support'st her throne ;
For thee, what fervent thanks, what offer'd vows,
Do prostrate millions pay !

Bur. Bright excellence,
This fair applause too highly over-rates,
Too much extols, the low deserts of Cecil.

Not. What praises are too high for patriot-worth ;
Or what applause exceeds the price of virtue ?
My lord, conviction has at last subdu'd me,
And I am honour's proselyte :—too long
My erring heart pursued the ways of faction ;
I own myself t' have been your bitt'rest foe,

And join'd with Essex in each foul attempt
To blast your honour, and traduce your fame.

Bur. Tho' ne'er my wishing heart could call you friend,
Yet honour and esteem I always bore you ;
And never meant, but with respect to serve you.
‘ It grieves me, madam, to have thus offended,
‘ Where most my wishes labour'd to oblige.

‘ Not. I know your honour and your virtues well ;
‘ Your public plans, design'd for England's good,
‘ And all your private merit's weight. But, Oh,
‘ How blind is reason in the maze of passion !
‘ I sought your ruin, labour'd for your fall.
‘ But, if repentance may atone for guilt,
‘ Or self-reproach for sharpest penance pangs,
‘ No mortal breast e'er felt more woe than mine,
‘ And Burleigh now may rank me for his friend.
‘ Bur. That such a worth of soul should be abus'd !
‘ Could I accuse my heart but of a thought
‘ To do you wrong ; if any purpose ever
‘ Against your welfare in my soul arose,
‘ That look'd with malice on your shining merit,
‘ Your matchless beauty, or your brighter virtues
‘ Then let me live despis'd, a proverb made
‘ To ev'ry passing slave ; nay more, the scorn
‘ And trampled footstool of the man I hate.’

Not. It is enough, my lord, I know it well,
And feel rekindling virtue warm my breast ;
Honour and gratitude their force resume
Within my heart, and every wish is yours.

O Cecil, Cecil, what a foe hast thou,
A deadly foe, whilst hated Essex lives !

Bur. I know it well, but can assign no cause.

Not. Ambition's restless hand has wound his thoughts
Too high for England's welfare ; nay, the queen
Scarce sits in safety on her throne, while he,
Th' audacious Essex, freely treads at large,
And breathes the common air. Ambition is
The only god he serves, to whom he'd sacrifice
His honour, country, friends, and every tie
Of truth, and bond of nature ; nay, his love.

Bur. ‘ I find this bus'ness work as I would have it.

‘ [Aside.]
The

The man that in his public duty fails,
 On private virtue will disdainful tread,
 As steps to raise him to some higher purpose :
 In vain each softer wish would plead with him,
 No tender movement in his soul prevails,
 And mighty love, who rules all nature else,
 Must follow here in proud ambition's train.

Not. Pronounce it not, my soul abhors the sound,
 Like death.—Oh, Cecil, will you kindly lend
 Some pity to a wretch like me ?

Bur. Command,

Madam ; my power and will are yours. ‘ I feel
 ‘ Your wrongs, I feel the base returns you’ve met
 ‘ From this ungrateful and disloyal man,
 ‘ Tho’ oft your goodness screen’d him from reproof.
 ‘ Believe me worthy to partake your grievance,
 ‘ Accept my service, and employ my power.’

Not. Will Cecil’s friendly ear vouchsafe to bend
 Its great attention to a woman’s wrongs,
 Whose pride and shame, resentment and despair,
 Rise up in raging anarchy at once,
 To tear with ceaseless pangs my tortur’d soul ?
 Words are unequal to the woes I feel,
 And language lessens what my heart endures.
 Passion repuls’d with scorn, and proud disdain,
 Recoils indignant on my shrinking soul,
 Beats back my vital springs, and crushes life.

Bur. Madam, your wrongs, I must confess, are great ;
 Yet still, I fear, you know not half his falsehood.
 ‘ Who, that had eyes to look on beauty ; who,
 ‘ That had a heart to feel that beauty’s power ;’
 Who, but the false, perfidious Essex, could
 Prefer to Nottingham a Rutland’s charms ?
 Start not—By heav’n, I tell you nought but truth,
 What I can prove, past doubt ; that he receiv’d
 The lady Rutland’s hand, in sacred wedlock,
 The very night before his setting out
 For Ireland.

Not. Oh, may quick destruction seize ‘em !
 May furies blast, and hell destroy their peace !
 May all their nights—

Bur. I pray, have patience, Madam,

14 THE EARL OF ESSEX.

Restrain a while your rage ; curses are vain.
But there's a surer method to destroy him ;
And if you'll join with me, 'tis done : he falls.

Not. Ha ! say'st thou, Burleigh ! Speak, my genius, speak ;

Be quick as vengeance' self to tell me how.

Bur. You must have heard the commons have impeach'd him,

And we have proofs sufficient for his ruin.
But the queen—you know how fair he stands
In her esteem ; and Rutland too, his wife,
Hath full possession of the royal ear.

What then avail impeachments, or the law's
Severest condemnation, while the queen
May snatch him from the uplifted hand of justice ?
Here then, my Nottingham, begins thy task :
Try ev'ry art t' incense the queen against him,
Then step between her and the lady Rutland,
' Let not her fondness find the least access
' To the queen's heart to counterwork our purpose.'
Observe Southampton too, with jealous eye ;
Prevent, as much as possible, his suit :
For well I know he will not fail to try
His eloquence on the behalf of Essex.

Not. It shall be done ; his doom is fix'd ; he dies.
Oh, 'twas a precious thought ! I never knew
Such heart-felt satisfaction ! Essex dies,
And Rutland, in her turn, shall learn to weep.
The time is precious ; I'll about it strait.
Come, vengeance, come, assist me now to breathe
Thy venom'd spirit in the royal ear.

[Exit Nottingham.]

Bur. There spoke the very genius of the sex.
A disappointed woman sets no bounds
To her revenge. Her temper's form'd to serve me.

Enter Raleigh.

Ral. The lord Southampton, with ungovern'd rage,
Resents aloud his disappointed measures.
I met him in the outward court ; he seeks
In haste your lordship, and, forgetting forms,
Pursues me hither, and demands to see you.

Bur. Raleigh, 'tis well--Withdraw--Attend the queen.
Leave me to deal with this o'erbearing man. [Exit. Ral.]

Enter

Enter Southampton.

South. Where is the man, whom virtue call her friend ?
I give you joy, my lord !—Your quenchless fury
At length prevails,—and now your malice triumphs.
You've hunted honour to the toil of faction,
And view his struggles with malicious joy.

Bur. What means, my lord ?

South. Oh, fraud ! shall valiant Essex
Be made a sacrifice to your ambition !
Oh, it sinells foul indeed, of rankest malice,
And the vile statesman's craft. You dare not sure
Thus bid defiance to each shew of worth,
Each claim of honour : dare not injure thus
Your suffering country in her bravest son !

Bur. But why should stern reproach her angry brow
Let fall on me ? Am I alone the cause
That gives this working humour strength ? Do I
Instruct the public voice to warp his actions ?
Justice, untaught, shall poize th' impartial scales,
And every curious eye may mark the beam.

South. The specious shield, which private malice bears,
Is ever blazon'd with some public good ;
Behind that artful fence, fculk low, conceal'd
The bloody purpose, and the poison'd shaft ;
Ambition there, and envy nestle close ;
From thence, they take their fatal aim unseen ;
And honest merit is the destin'd mark.

Bur. ‘ Your warm distemper'd zeal puts rashly by
‘ The cool direct ng hand of wholesome reason.
‘ No imputa ion foul shall rest on me ;
‘ My honest purposes defy aloud
‘ The slander-spreading tongue of busy faction,
‘ To cast its venom on my fair report,
‘ Or tell posterity, thus Cecil did.’

My country's welfare, and my queen's command,
Have ever been my guiding stars through life,
My sure direction still.—To these I now
Appeal ;—from these, no doubt, this lord's misconduct
Hath widely stray'd ; and reason, not reviling,
Must now befriend his cause.

South. How ill had Providence

Dispos'd the suffering world's opprest affairs
 Had sacred right's eternal rule been left
 To crafty politicians' partial sway !
 Then power and pride would stretch th' enormous grasp,
 And call their arbitrary portion, justice :
 Ambition's arm, by av'rice urg'd, would pluck
 The core of honesty from virtue's heart,
 And plant deceit and rancour in its stead :
 Falsehood would trample then on truth and honour,
 And envy poison sweet benevolence.
 Oh, 'tis a goodly group of attributes,
 And well befits some statesman's righteous rule !
 Out, out upon such base and bloody doings !
 The term of being is not worth the sin ;
 No human bosom can endure its dart.
 Then put this cruel purpose from thee far,
 Nor let the blood of Essex whelm thy soul.

Bur. 'Tis well, my lord ! your words no comment
 need ;
 • No doubt, they've well explain'd your honest meaning ;
 • 'Tis clear and full.—To parts, like yours, discretion
 • Wou'd be a clog, and caution but incumbrance.'
 Yet mark me well, my lord, the clinging ivy
 With th' oak may rise, but with it too must fall.

Sout'. Thy empty threats, ambitious man, hurt not
 The breast of truth. Fair innocence, and faith,
 Those strangers to thy practis'd heart, shall shield
 My honour, and preserve my friend.—In vain,
 Thy malice, with unequal arm, shall strive
 To tear th' applauded wreath from Essex' brow ;
 His honest laurel, held aloft by fame,
 • Above thy blasting reach, shall safely flourish,'
 Shall bloom immortal to the latest times :
 Whilst thou, amidst thy tangling snares involv'd,
 Shalt sink confounded, and unpitied fall.

Bur. Rail on, proud lord, and give thy choler vent :
 It wastes itself in vain ; the queen shall judge
 Between us in this warm debate. To her
 I now repair ; and in her royal presence
 You may approve your innocence and faith.
 Perhaps you'll meet me there.—Till then, farewell.

[Exit.
Sout'.

South. Confusion wait thy steps, thou cruel monster !
 My noble and illustrious friend betray'd,
 By crafty faction and tyrannic power,
 His sinking trophies, and his falling fame,
 Oppress my very soul. I'll to the queen,
 Lay all their envy open to her view,
 Confront their malice, and preserve my friend. [Exit.]

The Queen discovered, sitting on her throne.

Raleigh, Lords, and Attendants.

Q. Without consulting me ! presumptuous man !
 Who governs here ?—What ! am not I your queen ?
 You dar'd not, were he present, take this step.

Ral. Dread sovereign, your ever faithful commons
 Have, in their gratitude and love for you,
 Preferr'd this salutary bill against him.

Enter Burleigh.

Q. You, my lord Burleigh, must have known of this.
 The commons here impeach the earl of Essex
 Of practising against the state and me.
 Methinks I might be trusted with the secret.
 Speak, for I know it well, 'twas thy contrivance.
 Ha ! was it not ? You dare not say it was not.

Bur. I own my judgment did concur with theirs.
 His crimes, I fear, will justify the charge,
 And vindicate their loyalty and mine.

Q. Ha ! tell not me your smooth, deceitful story !
 I know your projects, and your close cabals.
 You'd turn my favour into party feuds,
 And use my scepter as the rod of faction :
 But Henry's daughter claims a nobler soul.
 I'll nurse no party, but will reign o'er all,
 And my sole rule shall be to bleſs my people :
 Who serves them best has still my highest favour :
 This Essex ever did.

Enter Southampton.

Behold, Southampton,
 What a base portrait's here ! The faithful Essex
 Here drawn at large associating with rebels,
 To spoil his country and dethrone his queen.

South. It is not like.—By Heav'n the hand of envy
 Drew these false lines, distorted far from truth

18 THE EARL OF ESSEX.

As light to shade, or hell to highest heav'n.
 Then suffer not, thou best of queens, this lord,
 This valiant lord, to fall a sacrifice
 To treachery and base designs ; who now
 Engages death in all his horrid shapes,
 Amidst a hardy race, inur'd to danger ;
 But let him face to face, this charge encounter,
 And every falsehood, like his foes, shall fly.

Q. To me you seem to recommend strict justice,
 In all her pomp of power. But are you sure
 No subtle vice conceal'd assumes her garb ?
 Take heed, that malice does not wear the mask,
 Nor envy deck her in the borrow'd guise.
 • Rancour has often darken'd reason's eye,
 • And judgment winks, when passion holds the scale.⁹
 Impeach the very man to whom I owe
 My brightest rays of glory ! Look to it, lords,
 Take care, be cautious on what ground you tread ;
 Let honest means alone secure your footing.
 Raleigh and you withdraw, and wait our leisure.

[Exeunt Raleigh and South.
 Lord Burleigh, stay ; we must with you have farther
 Conf'rence.—I see this base contrivance plain.
 Your jealousy and pride, your envy of
 His shining merit, brought this bill to light.
 But mark me, as you prize our high regard
 And favour, I command you to suppress it :
 Let not our name and power be embarrass'd
 In your perplexing schemes. 'Twas you began,
 And therefore you must end it.

Bur. I obey.
 Yet humbly would intreat you to consider
 How new, unpopular, this step must be,
 To stand between your parliament's enquiry
 And this offending lord.—We have such proofs—

Q. Reserve your proofs to a more proper season,
 And let them then appear. But once again
 We charge you, on your duty and allegiance,
 To stop this vile proceeding ; and to wait
 Till Essex can defend himself in person.
 If then your accusations are of force,
 The laws, and my consent, no doubt, are open.

THE EARL OF ESSEX.

He has my strict command, with menace mix'd,
To end effectually this hated war,
Ere he presume to quit the Irish coast.

Bur. Madam, my duty now compels me to—

Q. No more! see that my orders be obey'd. [Exit. Bur.
Essex a traitor!—it can never be—
His grateful and his honest soul disdains it.—
I know him hot, ambitious, rash, impatient;
But then he's firmly anchor'd in his duty:
'Tho' stormy passions tois him to and fro.
Can he prove false? so high advanc'd, so honour'd,
So near my favour—and—I fear, so near
My heart!—Impossible.—This Burleigh hates him,
And, his rival, therefore would destroy him,
But he shall find his narrow schemes defeated.
In vain their fraudulent efforts shall combine
To shake my settled soul, my firm design;
Resolv'd to lift bright virtue's palm on high,
Support her grandeur, and her foes defy. [Exit.]

END of the FIRST ACT.

A C T II.

Enter Burleigh and Raleigh.

BURLEIGH.

E SSEX arriv'd! Confusion to my hopes!
His presence will destroy me with the queen.
I much suspect he had some private notice,
Perhaps, a punctual order, to return.
He lurks too near her heart.—What's to be done?
‘ Prepare the witnesses with speed; apprise
‘ The lady Nottingham.—Southampton's pride,
‘ And Rutland's too, will lift the crest again.
‘ But fly, my Raleigh, send me Nottingham.

[Exit Raleigh.

‘ We must alarm the queen with new commotions
‘ In many parts of her dominions rais'd:
‘ All this, and more, must now be paf'd for truth.
‘ This sudden blow has struck me to the soul;
‘ ’Tis gone too far, he dies—proud Essex now,
. Or Cecil falls.’ Now is th' important crisis—

Keep

20 THE EARL OF ESSEX.

Keep up thy usual strength ; my better genius,
Direct my steps to crush my mortal foe.

Enter Queen and Raleigh.

Q. It cannot be ! Return'd without my leave !
Against my strict command !—Impossible ;

Ra!. Madam, the earl is now at court, and begs
An audience of your majesty.

Q. Amazing !
What ! break his trust ! desert his high command !
Forfaze his post, and disobey his queen !
'Tis false—invented all.—You wish it so.

Bur. Madam, I wish some other rumours false :
Reports, I fear, of great concern to you.

Q. What rumours ? what reports ? Your frown wou'd much
Denote : your preface seems important.—Speak.

Bur. Some new commotions are of late sprung up
In Ireland, where the west is all in arms,
And moves with hasty march to join Tyrone,
And all his northern clans. A dreadful power !
Nay more, we have advices from the borders
Of sudden risings, near the banks of Tweed !
'Tis thought, to favour an attempt from Scotland.
Mean while, Tyrone embarks six thousand men
To land at Miltord, and march where Essex
Shall join them with his friends.

Q. In league with James !
And plotting with Tyrone ! It cannot be.
His very pride disdains such perfidy.
But is not Essex here without my leave !
Against my strict command ! that, that's rebellion.
The rest, if true, or false, it matters not.
What's to be done ?—admit him to my presence ?
No, no—my dignity, my pride forbid it.
Ungrateful man, appreach me not ; rise, rise,
Resentment, and support my soul ! Disdain,
Do thou afflict me.—Yes, it shall be so.

Bur. I see she muses deep ; her mind works upwards,
And paints its struggling efforts in her face.
Tyrone's invasion wakes her fear and anger,
And all her soul is one continued storm.

Q. For once my pride shall stoop ; and I will see

This

This rash, audacious, this once favour'd man ;
But treat him as his daring crimes deserve.

Enter Southampton.

South. [kneeling.] Permit me, Madam, to approach you thus ;

Thus lowly to present the humble suit
Of the much injur'd, faithful, earl of Essex,
Who dares not, unpermitted, meet your presence.
He begs, most gracious queen, to fall before
Your royal feet, to clear him to his sovereign,
Whom, next to heav'n, he wishes most to please.
Let faction load him with her labouring hand,
His innocence shall rise against the weight,
If but his gracious mistress deign to smile.

Q. Let him appear.

[Exit South.

Now to thy trying task,
My soul ! Put forth, exert thy utmost strength,
Nor let an injur'd queen be tame.—Lie still,
My heart ! I cannot listen to thee now.

Enter Essex and Southampton.

Essex. Forgive, thou injur'd Majesty, thou best
Of queens, this seeming disobedience. See,
I bend submissive in your royal presence,
With soul as penitent, as if before
Th' all-searching eye of heav'n. But, Oh, that frown !
My queen's resentment wounds my inmost spirit,
Strikes me like death, and pierces through my heart.

Q. You have obey'd, my lord ! you've serv'd me well !
My deadly foes are quell'd ! and you come home
A conqueror ! Your country bids you welcome !
And I, your queen, applaud ! —Triumphant man !
What ! is it thus that Essex gains his laurels ?
What ! is it thus you've borne my high commission ?
How durst you disregard your trusted duty,
Desert your province, and betray your queen ?

Essex. I came to clear my injur'd name from guilt,
Imputed guilt, and slanderous accusations.
My shame was wafted in each passing gale,
Each swelling tide came loaded with my wrongs ;
And echo sounded forth, from faction's voice,
The traitor Essex.—Was't not hard, my queen,
That while I stood in danger's dreadful front,

En.

Encountering death in every shape of terror,
And bleeding for my country?—Was't not hard,
My mortal enemies at home, like cowards,
Shou'd in my absence basely blast my faune?

Q. It is the godlike attribute of kings
To raise the virtuous and protect the brave.
I was the guardian of your reputation,
What malice, or what faction then cou'd reach you?
My honour was expos'd, engag'd for yours:
But you found reason to dislike my care,
And to yourself affum'd the wrested office.

Essex. If ought disloyal in this bosom dwells,
If ought of treason lodges in this heart,
May I to guilt and lasting shame be wedded,
The sport of faction, and the mark of scorn,
The world's derision, and my queen's abhorrence.
Stand forth the villain, whose invenom'd tongue
Would taint my honour and traduce my name,
Or stamp my conduct with a rebel's brand!
Lives there a monster in the haunts of men,
Dares tear my trophies from their pillar'd base,
Eclipse my glory and disgrace my deeds?

Q. This ardent language, and this glow of soul,
Were nobly graceful in a better cause;
Where virtue warrants, and where truth inspires:
But injur'd truth, with brow invincible,
Frowns stern reproof upon the false assertion,
And contradicts it with the force of facts.
From me you have appeal'd, ungrateful man;
The laws, not I, must listen to your plea.
Go, stand the test severe, abide the trial,
And mourn too late the bounty you abus'd.

[Excuse Queen, Southampton, &c.

Essex. Is this the just requital, then, of all
My patriot-toils and oft-encounter'd perils,
Amidst th' inclemencies of camps and climes?
Then be it so.—Unmov'd and dauntless, let me
This shock of adverse fortune firmly stand.
But yet, methinks, 'tis somewhat sudden too!
My greatness, now depriv'd of each support,
Which bore so long its envy'd weight aloit,
Must quick to ruin fall, and crush my hopes.

Enter Southampton.

South. Alas, my lord! the queen's displeasure kindles
With warmth increasing; whilst lord Burleigh labours
To inflame her wrath, and make it still burn fiercer.

Essex. I scorn the blaze of courts, the pomp of kings;
I give them to the winds, and lighter vanity;
Too long they've robb'd me of substantial bliss,
Of solid happiness, and true enjoyments.
But lead me to my mourning love; alas!
She sinks beneath oppressing ills; she fades,
She dies for my afflicting pangs, and seeks
Me, sorrowing, in the walks of woe.—Distraction!
Oh, lead me to her, to my soul's desire.

South. Let caution guide you in this dangerous step.
Consider well, my lord, the consequence—
For should the queen (forbid it Heaven') discover
Your private loves, your plighted hands, no power
On earth could step between you and destruction.
‘Lock up this secret from the prying world.’

Enter Burleigh.

Bur. My lord of Essex, 'tis the queen's command,
That you forthwith resign your staff of office;
And further, she confines you to your palace.

Essex. Welcome, my fate. Let fortune do her utmost;
I know the worst, and will confront her malice,
And bravely bear the unexpected blow.

Bur. The queen, my lord, demands your quick compliance.

Essex. Go, then, thou gladsome messenger of ill,
And, joyful, feast thy fierce rapacious soul
With Essex' sudden and accomplish'd fall.
The trampled corse of all his envy'd greatness,
Lies prostrate now beneath thy savage feet;
But still th' exalted spirit mounts above thee.
Go, tell the queen thy own detested story:
Full in her sight disclose the snaky labyrinths
And lurking snares you plant in virtue's path,
To catch integrity's unguarded step.

Bur. How ill repaid are public toils and cares,
‘Where active honesty, with itation join'd,
‘Incurs but calumny, and foul reproach!’
Your country has impeach'd, your queen accus'd you;

24 THE EARL OF ESSEX.

To these address your best defence, and clear
Your question'd conduct from disloyal guilt.
What answer to the queen shall I return ?

Essex. My staff of office I from her receiv'd,
And will to her, and her alone, resign it.

Bur. This bold refusal will incense the queen.
This arrogance will make your guilt the stronger.

[Exit.]

South. Sustain, my noble friend, thy wonted greatness ;
Collect thy fortitude, and summon all
Thy soul, to bear with strength this crushing weight,
Which falls severe upon thee ; whilst my friendship
Shall lend a helping hand, and share the burthen.
I'll hence with speed, and to the queen repair,
And all the power of warmest words employ,
To gain you yet one audience more, and bring
Her majesty to milder thoughts. Farewel. [Exit.]

Essex. As newly wak'd from all my dreams of glory,
Those gilded visions of deceitful joys,
I stand confounded at the unlook'd-for change,
And scarcely feel this thunder-bolt of fate.
The painted clouds, which bore my hopes aloft,
Alas, are now vanish'd to yielding air,
And I am fall'n indeed ! —
How weak is reason, when affection pleads !
How hard to turn the fond, deluded heart
From flatt'ring toys, which sooth'd its vanity !
The laurell'd trophy, and the loud applause,
The victor's triumph, and the people's gaze ;
The high-hung banner, and recording gold,
Subdue me still, still cling around my heart,
And pull my reason down.

Enter Rutland.

Rnt. Oh, let me fly
To clasp, embrace, the lord of my desires !
My soul's delight, my utmost joy, my husband !
I feel once more his panting bosom beat ;
Once more I hold him in my eager arms,
Behold his face, and lose my soul in rapture.

Essex. Transporting bliss ! my richest, dearest treasure !
My mourning turtle, my long absent peace,
Oh, come yet nearer, nearer to my heart !

My

My raptur'd soul springs forward to receive thee :
Thou Heav'n on earth, thou balm of all my woe !

Rut. O, shall I credit then each ravish'd sense ;
Has pitying Heav'n consented to my prayer ?
It has, it has ; my Essex is return'd !
But language poorly speaks the joys I feel ;
Let passion paint, and looks express my soul.

Essex. With thee, my sweetest comfort, I'll retire
From splendid palaces, and glitt'ring throngs,
To live embosom'd in the shades of joy,
Where sweet content extends her friendly arms,
And gives encreasing love a lasting welcome.
With thee I'll timely fly from proud oppression,
Forget our sorrows, and be bleis'd for ever.

Rut. O, let us hence, beyond the reach of power ;
Where fortune's hand shall never part us more.
In this calm state of innocence and joy,
I'll press thee to my throbbing bosom close.
Ambition's voice shall call in vain ; the world,
The thankless world, shall never claim thee more,
And all thy busines shall be love and me.

Essex. The queen, incens'd at my return, abandons me
To Cecil's malice, and the rage of faction.
I'm now no more the fav'rite child of fortune :
My enemies have caught me in the toil,
And life has nothing worth my wish, but thee.

Rut. Delusive dream of fancied happiness !
And has my fatal fondness then destroy'd thee ?
Oh, have I lur'd thee to the deadly snare
Thy cruel foes have laid ? 'Oh, have I put
Thy life in peril ? My officious tears
Would needs inform thee of their wicked schemes ?
I dreaded Cecil's malice, and my heart,
Longing to see thee, with impatience listen'd
To its own alarms ; and prudence funk beneath
The force of love.

Essex. Forbear, my only comfort ;
Oh, tell me not of danger, death, and Burleigh ;
Let every star shed down its mortal bane
On my unshelter'd head : whilist thus I fold
Thee in my raptur'd arms ; I'll brave 'em all
Defy my fate, and meet its utmost rigour.

26 THE EARL OF ESSEX.

Rut. Alas, my lord ! consider where we are.
 Oh ! 'tis the queen's apartment ; death is here.
 ' I came to thee through peril's ambush'd path,
 ' And every danger risqu'd for thy embrac e.'
 Each precious moment is by fate beset,
 And time stands trembling whilst we thus confer.

Essex. Then, let us hence from this detested place ;
 My rescu'd soul disdains the house of greatness,
 Where humble honesty can find no shelter.
 From hence we'll fly, where love and virtue call ;
 Where happiness invites — that wish of all :
 With sweet content enjoy each blissful hour,

[Exeunt.

END of the SECOND ACT.

A C T III.

Enter Burleigh and Nottingham.

NOTTINGHAM.

MY lord, I've sought you out, with much impatience.

You've had an audience of the queen : what follow'd ?

Bur. Soon as I told her Essex had refus'd
 To yield his dignities, and staff of office,
 ' Against her high command, pronounc'd by me,'
 She seem'd depriv'd of reason for a moment ;
 Her working mind betray'd contending passions,
 Which, in her alter'd face, appear'd by turns.
 She paus'd, like thunder in some kindling cloud,
 The instant burst with dreadful fury forth :
 ' And has th' ungrateful wretch defy'd my mandate ?
 ' The proud, audacious traitor scorn'd my power ?
 ' He dares not, sure.—He dies—the villain dies ?
 ' Then, sudden, soften'd into milder sounds,
 ' And call'd him rash, unhappy, gallant Essex !
 ' On me her fury fell ; my crafty plans
 ' Against his reputation, fame, and life,
 ' Had driven him to extremes—my malice did it—
 ' My envy was his bane ; with all that passion
 ' Or fury could suggest.—I begg'd to know

‘ Her royal will concerning Essex ; urg’d
 ‘ Again his insolence.—Amaz’d, a while
 ‘ She stood, and wist not what to do.—At length,
 ‘ Collecting all her mind, these words she utter’d :—
 Let him to the Tow’r.—Instantly withdrew,
 But soon was countermanded, and desir’d
 To bring the earl of Essex to her presence.
 I like it not, and much I fear, she’ll stand
 Between this high offender and the laws.

Not. Is Essex then secur’d ?

Bur. Madam, he is ;
 And now comes guarded to the court.

Enter Gentleman.

Gent. Madam, the queen
 Is in her closet, and desires to see you.

[Exit.

Not. I attend her.

Bur. She wants, no doubt, to be advis’d by you.
 Improve this fair occasion, urge it home ;
 ‘ She must be quick’ned by repeated strokes
 ‘ Of fresh indignities, by Essex offer’d
 ‘ T’ her royal person, and prerogative.
 ‘ Be circumspect and cautious ! mark her well.

Not. I know her foible. Essex long has had
 An interest in her heart, which nothing can
 O’erturn, except his own ungovern’d spirit.
 It is, indeed, the instrument by which
 We work, and cannot fail, if rightly us’d.

Bur. Madam, the queen expects you instantly.
 I must withdraw, and wait the earl’s arrival. [Exeunt.

Queen discovered.

Queen. Ill-fated, wretched man ! perverse and obstinate !
 He counterworks my grace, and courts destruction.
 He gives his deadly foes the dagger to Destroy him, and defeats my friendly purpose,
 Which would, by seeming to abandon, save him.
 Nor will he keep the mask of prudence on
 A moment’s space. What ! must I bear this scorn ?
 No : let me all the monarch reassume ;
 Exert my power, and be myself again.—
 Oh, ill-performing, disobedient heart !—
 Why shrink’st thou, fearful, from thy own resolve ?

C 2

Enter Nottingham.

Thou com'st in time ; I'm much disturb'd, abus'd,
My Nottingham, and wou'd complain to thee
Of insolence, neglect, and high contempt.
Essex presum'd to dictate laws within
My palace gates. How say'st thou, Nottingham ?

Not. Surely, my gracious queen, it cannot be !
His heat and passion never cou'd impel him
To take so bold a step, to such rash guilt :
Methinks his very honour should prevent it.

Queen. Thy open, honest mind untutor'd seems
In life's ungrateful and degenerate school ;
Where stubborn vice in every form appears,
Mocking correction's ineffectual rod.
It is, indeed, an evil hard to bear ;
This haughty man has wanton'd with my grace,
Abus'd my bounty, and despis'd my favours.
That giving goodness should profusely flow
T'enrich the furl'y glebe, where only thorns
And noxious weeds will spring !
Resentment, then, shall in her turn prevail ;
To angry laws I'll give this victim up.

Not. His conduct has, I fear, been too unguarded :
His hasty temper knows not where to stop.
Ambition is the spur of all his actions,
Which often drives him o'er his duty's limits ;
(At least his enemies would have it so.)
But malice, Madam, seldom judges right.

Queen. Oh, Nottingham ! his pride is past enduring ;
This insolent, audacious man forgets
His honour and allegiance ; — and refus'd
To render up his staff of office, here,
Beneath my very eye.

Not. Presumptuous man !
Your faithful subjects will resent this pride,
This insolence, this treason to their queen ;
They must, my gracious sovereign.—'Tis not safe
To shield him longer from their just resentment.
Then give him up to justice and the laws.

Queen. You seem well pleas'd to urge severity.—
Offended majesty but seldom wants
Such sharp advisers.—Yet no attribute

So well befits th' exalted seat supreme,
And power's disposing hand, as clemency.
Each crime must from its quality be judg'd ;
And pity there shou'd interpose, where malice
Is not th' aggressor. Hence ! I'll hear no more.

Not. Madam, my sentiments were well intended ;
Justice, not malice, mov'd my honest zeal.
My words were echos of the public voice,
Which daily rises, with repeated cries
Of high complaint, against this haughty lord.
I pity, from my heart, his rash attempts,
And much esteem the man.

Queen. Go, Nottingham,
My mind's disturb'd, and send me Rutland hither.

[Exit Not.]

O, vain distinction of exalted state !
No rank ascends above the reach of care,
Nor dignity can shield a queen from woe.
Despotic nature's stronger sceptre rules,
And pain and passion in her right prevail.
Oh, the unpity'd lot, severe condition,
Of solitary, sad, dejected grandeur !
Alone condemn'd to bear th' unsocial throb
Of heart-felt anguish, and corroding grief ;
Depriv'd of what, within his homely shed,
The poorest peasant in affliction finds,
The kind, condoling comfort of a dear
Partaking friend.—

Enter Countess of Rutland.

Rutland, I want thy timely
Counsel. I'm importun'd, and urg'd to punish—
But justice, sometimes, has a cruel sound,
‘ Where mercy may with prudence meet, and both
‘ Agree to soften rigour.’—Essex has,
No doubt, provok'd my anger, and the laws ;
His haughty conduct calls for sharp reproof,
And just correction. Yet I think him guiltless
Of studied treasons, or design'd rebellion.
Then, tell me, Rutland, what the world reports,
What censure says of his unruly deeds.

Rut. The world, with envy's eye beholds his merit :
Madam, 'tis malice all, and false report.

30 THE EARL OF ESSEX.

I know his noble heart, 'tis fill'd with honour :
 No trait'rous taint has touch'd his generous soul ;
 His grateful mind still glows with pure affection ;
 And all his thoughts are loyalty and you.

Queen. I grant you, Rutland, all you say, and think
 The earl possest's of many splendid virtues.
 What pity 'tis, he should afford his foes
 Such frequent, sad occasions to undo him !

Rut. What human heart can, unafflicted, bear
 Such manly merit in distress : ' such worth
 ' Betray'd; such valour in the toil,' beset
 By cruel foes, and faction's savage cry ?
 My good, my gracious mistress, stretch, betimes,
 Your saving arm, and snatch him from destruction,
 From deadly malice, treachery, and Cecil.
 O, let him live, to clear his conduct up !
 My gracious queen, he'll nobly earn your bounty,
 And with his dearest blood deserve your mercy.

Queen. Her words betray a warm, unusual fervour ;
 Mere friendship never could inspire this transport. [Aside.
 I never doubted but the earl was brave ;
 His life and valiant actions all declare it :
 I think him honest too, but rash and headstrong.
 I gladly would preserve him from his foes,
 And therefore am resolv'd once more to see him.

Rut. Oh, 'tis a godlike thought, and Heav'n itself
 Inspires it. Sure some angel moves your heart,
 Your royal heart, to pity and forgiveness.
 This gracious deed shall shine in future story,
 And deck your annals with the brightest virtue ;
 Posterity shall praise the princely act,
 And ages yet to come record your goodness.

Queen. I'll hear no more—Must I then learn from you
 To know my province, and be taught to move,
 As each designing mind directs ?—Leave me.

Rut. Her frowns are dreadful, and her eye looks terror.
 I tremble for my Essex. Save him, Heav'n ! [Exit.

Queen. Her warmth has touch'd me home. My jealous
 My fearful and suspicious soul's alarm'd. [heart,

Enter Burleigh, Raleigh, and others.

Bur. The earl of Essex waits your royal will. [port

Queen. Let him approach—And now, once more, sup-
 Thy

Thy dignity, my soul ; nor yield thy greatness
To strong usurping passion—But, he comes.

Enter Essex, Southampton, guards.

Essex. Permitted thus to bend, with prostrate heart,
[Kneels.]

Before your sacred majesty ; I come,
With every grateful sense of royal favour,
Deeply engrav'd within my conscious soul.

Queen. I sent my orders for your staff of office.

Essex. Madam, my envy'd dignities and honours,
I first from your own royal hand receiv'd ;
And therefore justly held it far beneath me
To yield my trophies, and exalted power,
So dearly purchas'd in the field of glory,
To hands unworthy. No, my gracious queen,
I meant to lay them at your royal feet ;
Where life itself a willing victim falls,
If you command.

Queen. High swelling words, my lord, but ill supply
The place of deeds, and duty's just demand.
In danger's onset, and the day of trial,
Conviction still on acting worth attends ;
Whilst mere professions are by doubts encumber'd.

Essex. My deeds have oft declar'd, in danger's front,
How far my duty and my valour lead me.
Allegiance still my thirst of glory fir'd,
And all my bravely gather'd, envy'd laurels,
Were purchas'd only to adorn my queen.

Queen. ‘ Yet fact o'er fallacy must still prevail,
‘ And eloquence to simple truth give way.’
Your guilty scorn of my intrusted power,
When with my mortal foes you tamely dally'd,
By hardy rebels brav'd, you poorly fought
A servile pause, and begg'd a shameful truce.
Should Essex thus, so meanly compromise,
And lose the harvest of a plenteous glory,
In idle treaties, and suspicious party ?

Essex. Oh, deadly stroke ! My life's the destin'd mark.
The poison'd shaft has drunk my spirits deep.
Is't come to this ? Conspire with rebels ! Ha !
I've serv'd you, Madam, with the utmost peril,
And ever glory'd in th' illustrious danger ;

Where

Where famine fac'd me with her meagre mein,
 And pestilence and death brought up her train.
 I've fought your battles, in despite of nature,
 Where seasons ficken'd, and the clime was fate.
 My power to parly, or to fight, I had
 From you ; the time and circumstance did call
 Aloud for mutual treaty and condition ;
 For that I stand a guarded felon here.—A traitor,
 Hemm'd in by villains, and by slaves surrounded.

Queen. Shall added insolence, with crest audacious,
 Her front uplift against the face of power.
 Think not that injur'd majesty will bear
 Such arrogance uncheck'd, or unchaftis'd.
 No public trust becomes the man, who treads,
 With scornful steps, in honour's sacred path,
 And stands at bold defiance with his duty.

Essex. Away with dignities and hated trust,
 With flattering honours, and deceitful power !
 Invert th' eternal rules of right and justice ;
 Let villains thrive, and out-cast virtue perish ;
 Let slaves be rais'd, and cowards have command.
 Take, take your gaudy trifles back, those baits
 Of vice, and virtue's bane.—'Tis clear, my queen,
 My royal mistress, casts me off ; nay, joins
 With Cecil to destroy my life, and fame.

Queen. Presuming wretch ! Audacious traitor !

Essex. Traitor !

Queen. Hence from my sight, ungrateful slave, and
 At distance to revere your queen. [learn

Essex. Yes ; let
 Me fly beyond the limits of the world,
 And nature's verge, from proud oppression far,
 From malice, tyranny, from courts, from you.

Queen. Traitor ! villain ! [Strikes him.]

Essex. Confusion ! what, a blow !
 Restrain, good Heav'n ! down, down, thou rebel passion,
 And, judgment, take the reins. Madam, 'tis well—
 Your soldier falls degraded.

His glory's tarnish'd, and his fame undone.
 O, bounteous recompence from royal hands !
 But you, ye implements, beware, beware,
 What honour wrong'd, and honest wrath can aſt.

Queen.

Queen. What would th' imperious traitor do ? My life
Beyond thy wretched purpose stands secure.
Go, learn at leisure what your deeds deserve,
And tremble at the vengeance you provoke.

[Exeunt all but Essex and Southampton.

Essex. Disgrac'd and struck ! Damnation ! Death were Revenge ! Revenge ! [glorious.]

South. Alas, my friend ! what would
Thy rage attempt ? Consider well the great Advantage now your rash, ungovern'd temper
Affords your foes. The queen, incens'd, will let
Their fury loose.—I dread the dire event.

Essex. Has honest pride no just resentment left ?
Nor injur'd honour feeling ? Not revenge !
High Heaven shall bear, and earth regret my wrongs.
Hot indignation burns within my soul.
I'll do some dreadful thing—I know not what ;
Some deed as horrid as the shame I feel,
Shall startle nature, and alarm the world.
Then hence, like lightning, let me furious fly,
To hurl destruction at my foes on high ;
Pull down oppression from its tyrant seat,
Redeem my glory, or embrace my fate.

[Excunt.

END of the THIRD ACT.

A C T IV.

Enter Queen and Nottingham.

QUEEN.

NO T taken yet !

Not. No, Madam ; for the earl
Of Essex, leagu'd with desperate friends, made strong
And obstinate resistance ; till, at length,
O'erpower'd by numbers, and increasing force,
He fled for shelter to a small retreat,
A summer-house upon the Thames ; resolv'd
To perish, rather than submit to power.

Queen. O, wretch detested ! O, unheard-of treason !
• Conspire against my life, within my view !
• My reach ! so near my very palace gates !

Perfidious

34 THE EARL OF ESSEX.

• Perfidious monster!—What can prudence do,
 • Or human wisdom, more than judge from outside,
 • And flattering likeness? Kings can see no farther.
 • High Heav'n, alone, can read the heart, in all
 • Its utmost frauds, and mystic characters.'
 Oh, where shall majesty bestow its favours,
 Since Essex has a traitor prov'd to me,
 Whose arm hath rais'd him up to power and greatness;
 Whose heart hath shar'd in all his splendid triumphs,
 And feels, ev'n now, his trait'rous deeds with pity?
 But hence with pity, and the woman's pangs;
 Resentment governs, and the queen shall punish.

Enter Burleigh.

Bur. Illustrious queen, the traitors all are seiz'd.
 Th' intelligence was true. Their black debates
 Were held at Drury-house. The dire result
 Was this: that Essex should alarm the citizens
 To open mutiny, and bold rebellion.

• On this pernicious errand went the earl,
 • Join'd by his desp'rate and seditious friends.'
 Their purpose was to seize your royal palace,
 And sacred person; but your faithful people,
 As by one mind inform'd, one zeal inspir'd,
 Rose up at once, and with their virtue quell'd them.

Queen. Thanks to their honest, to their loyal hearts.
 But say, were any persons else concern'd,
 Of high distinction, or of noted rank?

Bur. Yes, Madam, many more, seduc'd of late,
 'Mong whom the bold Southampton foremost stands,
 • Precipitate and rash; whose pow'r tho' great,
 • Lags far behind his will to do you hurt.
 They're now our pris'ners, and are safe secur'd;
 But Essex, with Southampton, and the rest
 Of greater note, I would not dare dispose of
 Without your royal mandate; and they now
 Attend without, to know your final pleasure.

Queen. Is this the just return of all my care;
 My anxious toilsome days, and watchful nights?
 Have I sent forth a wish, that went not freighted
 With all my people's good? Or, have I life,
 Or length of days desir'd, but for their sake?
 The public good is all my private care.

• Have

‘ Have I not ever thought the meanest subject,
 ‘ Oppres’d by power, was, in his just complaint,
 ‘ Above a king ? What British bosom has
 ‘ By foreign tyranny been griev’d, whose wrongs
 ‘ I have not felt as mine, as mine redres’d ?
 ‘ Or have I, justly, made a single man
 ‘ My foe ?’ Then could I think this grateful isle
 Contain’d one traitor’s heart ? But, least of all,
 That Essex’ breast should lodge it ? Call the monster,
 And let me meet this rebel, face to face.
 Do you withdraw, and wait within our call.

[Exit Burleigh, &c:

Enter Essex.

You see we dare abide your dang’rous prefence,
 Tho’ treason fits within your heart enthron’d,
 And on that brow rebellion lours, where once
 Such boasted loyalty was said to flourish.
 How low the traitor can degrade the soldier !
 Guilt glares in conscious dye upon thy cheek,
 And inward horror trembles in thine eye.
 How mean is fraud ! How base ingratitude !

Essex. Forbear reproach, thou injur’d majesty,
 Nor wound, with piercing looks, a heart already
 With anguish torn, and bleeding with remorse.
 Your awful looks, alone, are arm’d with death,
 And justice gives them terror.

Queen. Hapless man !

What cause could prompt, what fiend could urge thee on
 To this detested deed ? Could I from thee
 Expect to meet this base return ? from thee,
 To whom I ought to fly, with all the confidence
 That giving bounty ever could inspire,
 Or seeming gratitude and worth could promise ?

Essex. Alas ! I own my crimes, and feel my treasons ;
 They press me down beneath the reach of pity.
 Despair alone can shield me from myself.
 Oh, let the little space I live be curs’d
 With countless woes ; let death, unpitied, come ;
 ‘ My name be mention’d with the utmost scorn,’
 If all my life can feel, or fame can suffer,
 Can serve to mitigate my queen’s displeasure,

Queen. My pride forbids me to approach thee more ;

My

My pity, rather, would relieve thy sorrow.
 ‘ I see conviction, and severe remorse,
 ‘ Within thy mind at work. But much I fear,
 ‘ That death alone can calm the raging conflict.’
 The people’s clamours, and my special safety,
 Call loud for justice, and demand your life.
 But if forgiveness from an injur’d queen
 Can make the few short hours you live more easy,
 I give it freely from my pitying heart ;
 And wish my willing power could grant thee more.

Essex. Oh, sounds angelic ! goodness undeferv’d !
 My swelling heart can keep no bounds, my soul
 Flows o’er.—And will my gracious queen forgive me ?
 Oh, let me prostrate thus before you fall,
 My better angel, and my guardian genius !
 Permit me, royal mistress, to announce
 My faithful sentiments, my soul’s true dictates ;
 Vouchsafe your Essex but this one request,
 This only boon, he’ll thank you with his last,
 His dying breath, and bless you in his passage.

Queen. Rise, my lord.
 If aught you have to offer can allay
 Your woes, and reconcile you to your fate,
 Proceed ;—and I with patient ear will listen.

Essex. My real errors, and my seeming crimes
 Would weary mercy, and make goodness poor :
 And yet the source of all my greatest faults
 Was loyalty misled, and duty in extreme.
 So jealous was my sanguine heart, so warm
 Affection’s zeal, I could not bear the least
 Suspicion of my duty to my queen.
 This drove me from my high command in Ireland ;
 This, too, impell’d me to that rude behaviour
 Which justly urg’d the shameful blow I felt ;
 And this (O, fatal rashness !) made me think
 My queen had given her Essex up, a victim
 To statesmen’s schemes, and wicked policy.
 Stung by that piercing thought, my madness flew
 Beyond all bounds, and now, alas ! has brought me
 To this most shameful fall ; and, what’s still worse,
 My own reproaches, and my queen’s displeasure.

Queen. Unhappy man ! My yielding soul is touch'd,
And pity pleads thy cause within my breast.

Essex. Say but, my gracious sovereign, ere I go
For ever from your presence, that you think me
Guiltless of all attempts against your throne,
And sacred life. Your faithful Essex ne'er
Could harbour in his breast so foul a thought.
Believe it not, my queen. By Heav'n, I swear,
When in my highest pitch of glory rais'd,
The splendid noon of fortune's brightest sun-shine,
Not ages of renown could yield me half
The joy, nor make my life so greatly blest,
As saving yours, tho' for a single hour.

Queen. My lord, I think you honest. Nay, I own,
Whatever coldness I put on, was meant
To save you from the malice of your foes.
I judg'd your crimes, what you yourself pronounc'd 'em,
The rash effect of an intemp'rare zeal.

Essex. Was ever wretch like Essex thus undone
By goodness in excess, and lavish'd grace!
Oh, I could tear my erring heart, with these Revenging hands !—What blessings have I lost !
What clemency abus'd !—Now could I wish
For lengthen'd life,—indeed for endless years.
A whole eternity's too short, to shew
My pious sorrows, and atone my folly.

Queen. ‘ Too well the passage to my heart he finds ;
‘ And pity's hand lets in the dangerous guest.
‘ How weak is reason, when oppos'd to nature ! [Aside.]
My lord, I would convince you that I still
Regard your life, and labour to preserve it ;
But cannot screen you from a public trial.
With prudence make your best defence : but should
Severity her iron jurisdiction
Extend too far, and give thee up condemn'd
To angry laws, thy queen will not forget thee.
Yet, lest you then shou'd want a faithful friend,
(For friends will fly you in the time of need)
Here, from my finger, take this ring, a pledge
Of mercy ; having this, you ne'er shall need
An advocate with me ; for whensoe'er
You give, or send it back, by Heav'n, I swear,

38 THE EARL OF ESSEX.

As I do hope for mercy on my soul,
That I will grant whatever boon you ask.

Effex. Oh, grace surprizing ! most amazing goodness !
Words cannot paint the transports of my soul.
Let me receive it on my grateful knees,
At once to thank and bless the hand that gives it.

Queen. Depend, my lord, on this ; 'twixt you and me
This ring shall be a private mark of faith [Gives the ring].
Inviolate. Be confident, chear up,
Dispel each melancholy fear, and trust
Your sovereign's promise ; she will ne'er forsake you.

Effex. Let Providence dispose my lot as 'twill,
May watchful angels ever guard my queen ;
May healing wisdom in her counsels reign,
And firm fidelity surround her throne ;
May victory her dreaded banners bear,
And joyful conquests crown her soldier's brow ;
Let every bliss be mingled in her cup,
And Heaven at last become her great reward. [Exit.]

Queen. 'Tis done ;
And yet foreboding tremors shake my heart.
Something sits heavy here, and preifes down
My spirits with its weight. What can it mean ?
Suppose he is condemn'd ; my royal word
Is plighted for his life ; his enemies,
No doubt, will censure much.—No matter ; let 'em.
I know him honest, and despise their malice.
‘ Unhappy state, where mercy and compassion
‘ Too often meet with clamour and reproach !
‘ But princes must endure, for public good,
‘ The narrow censures of misguiding crowds.’

Enter Countess of Rutland.

Rut. Where is the queen ? I'll fall before her feet
Prostrate, implore, besiege her royal heart,
And force her to forgive.

Quetn. What means this frenzy ?

Rut. Oh, gracious queen, if ever pity touch'd
Your generous breast, let not the cruel axe
Destroy his precious life ; preserve my Effex,
‘ Preserve, from shameful death, the noble, loyal,
‘ Oh, save the brave, the best of subjects.—Save’
My life, my hope, my joy, ‘ my all,’ my husband.

Queen.

Q. Husband ! What sudden deadly blow is this !
Hold up, my soul, nor sink beneath this wound.
You beg a traitor's life !

Rut. Oh, gracious queen !
He ever lov'd---was ever faithful, brave---
If nature dwells about your heart, Oh, spurn
Me not ! My lord ! my love ! my husband bleeds !

Q. Take her away.

Rut. I cannot let you go.

' Hold off your hands'---Here on this spot I'll fix,
Here lose all sense. Still let me stretch these arms,
Inexorable queen, he yet may live.

Oh, give him to my poor afflicted heart !

One pitying look, to fave me from distraction.

Q. I'll hear no more. I'm tortur'd---take her hence.

Rut. Nay, force me not away.—Inhuman wretches !
Oh, mercy, mercy ! Then to thee, good Heav'n,
(My queen, my cruel queen, denies to hear me)
To thee I call, to thee for mercy bend.
Melt down her bosom's frozen sense to feel
Some portion of my deadly grief, my fell
Distraction. Turn, Oh, turn, and see a wife,
A tortur'd wife—

Q. Why am I not obey'd ?

Rut. Nay, do not thus
Abandon me to fell despair. Just Heaven,
That fees my sorrows, will avenge the wrong,
This cruel wrong, this barbarous tyranny. [Forced off.]

Q. Wedded to Rutland ! Most unhappy pair !
And, Oh, ill fated queen ! Never till now
Did sorrow settle in my heart its throne.
Now black despair its cloudy curtain draws
Around thy setting peace, where joy, alas !
No more shall dawn, nor smiling hope return.
Recall my pledge of safety from his hands,
And give him up to death !—But life or death
To me is equal now. ' Distraction dwells
' Within my tortur'd soul, and tories rend it.'
Unhappy state, where peace shall never come !
One fatal moment has confirm'd my doom,
Turn'd all my comfort to intestine strife,
And fill'd with mortal pangs, my future life.

[Exit.]

END of the FOURTH ACT.

A C T V.

Enter Raleigh, and Lieutenant of the Tower.

RALEIGH.

THEIR peers, with much indulgence, heard their plea,
And gave them ample scope for their defence ;
But nought avail'd, their crimes were too notorious.
They bore their sentence with becoming spirit ;
And here's the royal mandate for their deaths.—
The lady Nottingham !—What brings her hither ?

Enter Lady Nottingham.

Not. Lieutenant, lead me to the earl of Essex,
I bring a message to him from the queen.

Lieu. He's with his friend, the brave Southampton,
Madam,

Preparing now for his expected fate.

But I'll acquaint his lordship with your pleasure. [Exit.

Ral. What means this message ? Does the queen re-
lent ?

Not. I fear she does : ‘ for such a war of passions,
Such varying tumults never strove within
Her breast till now. Sometimes she rails at Essex,
And calls him villain, traitor, dooms him dead ;
Yet, in a moment, turns again to pity.
At length she sent me to th’ ungrateful earl,
To learn if he could offer aught that might
Induce her royal mercy to forgiveness.’
Go you to court, for Cecil there expects you.
I’ve promis’d to acquaint him with what passes
Twixt me and Essex e’re I see the queen.

Ral. Madam, I go.

[Exit.]

Not. Now, vengeance, steel my heart !
Offended woman, whilst her pride remains,
To malice only and revenge will bow ;
And every virtue at that altar sacrifice.
But see, he comes, with manly sorrow clad.
There was a time, that presence cou’d subdue
My pride, and melt my heart to gentle pity.
I then could find no joy but in his smiles ;

And

And thought him lovely as the summer's bloom :
But all his beauties are now hateful grown.

Enter Essex.

Essex. Whether you bring me death or life I know not.
But, if strict friendship and remembrance past
May aught presage to my afflicted heart,
Sure mercy only from those lips should flow,
And grace be utter'd from that friendly tongue.

Not. My lord, I'm glad you think me still your friend.
I come not to upbraid but serve you now ;
And pleas'd I am to be the messenger
Of such glad tidings, in the day of trouble,
As now I bring you. When the queen had heard
That by the lords you were condemn'd to die,
She sent me, in her mercy, here to know
If you had aught to offer that might move
Her royal clemency to spare your life.

Essex. Could any circumstance new lustre add
To my dread sovereign's goodness, 'tis the making
The kind, the generous Nottingham its messenger.
Oh, Madam ! cou'd my glowing heart express
It's grateful sentiments, 'twou'd speak such language
As angels utter, when they praise their Maker.

Not. 'Tis well, my lord ; but there's no time to spare,
The queen impatient waits for my return.

Essex. My heart was wishing for some faithful friend,
And bounteous Heav'n hath sent thee to my hopes.
Know then, kind Nottingham, for now I'll trust
Thee with the dearest secret of my life,
'Tis not long since the queen (who well foresaw
To what the malice of my foes wou'd drive me)
Gave me this ring, this sacred pledge of mercy ;
And with it, made a solemn vow to Heav'n,
That, whensoever I should give or send
It back again, she'd freely grant whate'er
Request I then shou'd make.

Not. Give, give it me,
My lord, and let me fly on friendship's wings,
To bear it to the queen, and to it add
My prayers and influence to preserve thy life.

Essex. Oh, take it then—it is the pledge of life,
The precious spring that drives my vital stream

42 THE EARL OF ESSEX.

Around, and keeps my heart still warm : ‘ it is
 ‘ The door of breath, the hope of joy, the shield
 ‘ Of friendship’—Oh, it is my dear Southampton’s
 Last, last remaining stay, his thread of being,
 Which more than words I prize.—O, take it then,
 Take it, thou guardian angel of my life,
 And offer up the incense of my pray’r !
 Oh, beg, intreat, implore her majesty,
 From public shame, and ignominious death,
 And from th’ obdurate axe, to save my friend.

Nor. My lord, with all the powers that nature gave,
 And friendship can inspire, I’ll urge the queen
 To grant you your request.

Effe. Kind Nottingham,
 Your pious offices shall ever be
 My fervent theme ; and if my doubtful span
 Relenting Heav’n should stretch to years remote,
 Each passing hour shall still remind my thoughts,
 And tell me that I owe my all to thee.

My friend shall thank you too for lengthen’d life.
 And now I fly with comfort to his arms,
 To let him know the mercy that you bring.

[Exit.]

‘ Nor. Yes, you shall feel my friendship’s weight fall heavy
 ‘ Upon your guilty soul, ungrateful man !
 ‘ Your false, disdainful heart shall pay the fine
 ‘ Of love neglected, and of beauty scorn’d.’

[Exit.]

SCENE, the Court.

Enter Queen and Burleigh.

Q. Ha ! is not Nottingham return’d ?

Bur. No, Madam.

Q. Dispatch a speedy messenger to hasten her.
 My agitated heart can find no rest.
 So near the brink of fate—unhappy man !

Enter Nottingham.

How now, my Nottingham, what news from Essex ?
 What says the earl ?

Nor. I wish, with all my soul,
 Th’ ungrateful task had been another’s lot.
 I dread to tell it—Loft, ill-fated man !

Q. What

Q. What means this mystery, this strange behaviour ?
Pronounce—declare at once ; what said the earl ?

Not. Alas, my queen, I fear to say ; his mind
Is in the strangest mood, that ever pride
On blackest thoughts begot. He scarce would speak ;
And when he did, it was with fullness,
With hasty tone, and down-cast look.

Q. Amazing !

Not feel the terrors of approaching death !
Nor yet the joyful dawn of promis'd life !

Not. He rather seem'd insensible to both,
And with a cold indifference heard your offer ;
Till warming up, by slow degrees, refinement
Began to swell his restless, haughty mind,
And proud disdain provok'd him to exclaim
Aloud, against the partial power of fortune,
And faction's rage. I begg'd him to consider
His sad condition, nor repulse with scorn
The only hand that could preserve him.

Q. Ha !

What ! Said he nothing of a private import ?
No circumstance—no pledge—no ring ?

Not. None, Madam,
But with contemptuous front disclaim'd at once
Your proffer'd grace ; and scorn'd, he said, a life
Upon such terms bestow'd.

Q. Impossible !

Could Essex treat me thus ? You basely wrong him,
And wrest his meaning from the purpos'd point.
Recall betimes the horrid words you've utter'd ;
Confess, and own the whole you've said was false.

Not. Madam, by truth, and duty both compell'd,
Against the pleadings of my pitying soul,
I must declare (Heav'n knows with what reluctance)
That never pride insulted mercy more.
He ran o'er all the dangers he had past ;
His mighty deeds ; his service to the state ;
Accus'd your majesty of partial leaning
To favourite lords, to whom he fails a sacrifice ;
Appeals to justice, and to future times,
How much he feels from proud oppression's arm :

Nay, something too he darkly hinted at,
Of jealous disappointment, and revenge.

Q. Eternal silence seal thy venom'd lips !
What hast thou utter'd, wretch, to rouze at once
A whirlwind in my foul, which roots up pity,
And destroys my peace ?

‘ Ha ! he defies me then ! Audacious traitor !’
Let him this instant to the block be led. [Exit. Not.
Upbraid me with my fatal fondness for him !
Ungrateful, barbarous ruffian ! Oh, Elizabeth !
Remember now thy long establish'd fame.
Thy envy'd glory, and thy father's spirit.
Accuse me of injustice too, and cruelty !
Yes, I'll this instant to the Tower, forget
My regal state, and to his face confront him :
Confound th' audacious villain with my presence,
And add new terrors to th' uplifted axe. [Exit.

SCENE, the Tower.

Essex and Southampton discovered.

Essex. Oh, name it not ! my friend shall live, he shall ;
I know her royal mercy, and her goodness,
Will give you back to life, to length of days,
And me to honour, loyalty, and truth.
Death is still distant far.

South. In life's first spring
Our green affections grew apace and prosper'd ;
The genial summer swell'd our joyful hearts,
To meet and mix each growing fruitful wish.
We're now embark'd upon that stormy flood
Where all the wise and brave are gone before us,
Ere since the birth of time, to meet eternity.
And what is death, did we consider right ?
Shall we, who fought him in the paths of terror,
And fac'd him in the dreadful walks of war,
Shall we astonish'd shrink, like frighted infants,
And start at scaffolds, and their gloomy trappings ?

Essex. Yet, still I trust long years remain of friendship.
Let smiling hope drive doubt and fear away,
And death be banish'd far ; where creeping age,
Disease and care, invite him to their dwelling.

I feel

I feel assurance rise within my breast,
That all will yet be well.

South. Count not on hope—

We never can take leave, my friend, of life,
On nobler terms. Life ! what is life ? A shadow !
Its date is but th' immediate breath we draw ;
Nor have we surety for a second gale ;
Ten thousand accidents in ambush lie
For the embody'd dream.
A frail and fickle tenement it is,
Which, like the brittle glass that measures time,
Is often broke, ere half its sands are run.

Essex. Such cold philosophy the heart disdains,
And friendship shudders at the moral tale.
My friend, the fearful precipice is past,
And danger dare not meet us more. Fly swift,
Ye better angels, waft the welcome tidings
Of pardon to my friend ; cf life and joy.

Enter Lieutenant.

Lieu. I grieve to be the messenger of woe,
But muft, my lords, intreat you to prepare
For instant death. Here is the royal mandate
That orders your immediate execution.

Essex. Immediate execution !—What, so sudden !
No message from the queen, or Nottingham ?

Lieu. None, Sir.

Essex. Deluded hopes ! Oh, worse than death !
Pefidious queen, to make a mock of life !
My friend, my friend destroy'd ! Oh, piercing thought !
Oh, dismal chance—In my destruction ruin'd !
In my sad fall undone ! Why could not mine,
My life attone for both ; my blood appease ?
Can you, my friend, forgive me ?

South. Yes, O yes,
My bosom's better half, I can. With thee
I'll gladly seek the coast unknown, and leave
The lessening mark of irksome life behind.
With thee, my friend, 'tis joy to die ! 'tis glory ;
For who would wait the tardy stroke of time,
Or cling, like reptiles, to the verge of being,
When we can bravely leap from life at once,
And spring triumphant in a friend's embrace ?

Enter

Enter Raleigh.

Ral. To you, my lord Southampton, from the queen
A pardon comes: your life her mercy spares.

Essex. For ever blest be that indulgent power
Which saves my friend. This weight ta'en off, my soul
Shall upward spring, and mingle with the blest.

South. All-ruling heavens, can this, can this be just?
Support me; hold, ye straining heart-strings, hold,
And keep my sinking frame from dissolution.
Oh, 'tis too much for mortal strength to bear,
Or thought to suffer! No, I'll die with thee.
They shall not part us, Essex.

Essex. Live, Oh, live,
Thou noblest, bravest, best of men and friends,
Whilst life is worth thy wish, till time and thou
Agree to part, and nature send thee to me;
Thou gen'rous soul, farewell;—live and be happy;
And, Oh! may life make largely up to thee
Whatever blessing fate has thus cut off
From thy departing friend.

Lieu. My lord, my warrant
Strictly forbids to grant a moment's time.

South. Oh, must we part for ever?—Cruel fortune!
Wilt thou then tear him hence?—‘Severe divorce!’
Let me cling round thy sacred person still,
Still clasp thee to my bosom close, and keep
Stern fate at distance.

Essex. Oh, my friend, we'll meet
Again where virtue finds a just reward,
Where factious malice never more can reach us.
Recall thy reason, be thyself once more.—
I fear it not.—This hideous moniter, death,
When seen at distance, shocks weak nature's eye;
But reason, as it draws more near, defies it.—
I thank thy sorrows, but cou'd spare 'em now.
I need not bid thee guard my fame from wrongs:
And, Oh! a dearer treasure to thy care
I truyl, than either life or fame—my wife.
Her bitter sorrows, pierce my soul; for her
My heart drops blood!...Oh, she will want a friend.
Then take her to thy care; do thou pour balm
On her deep-wounded spirit, and let her find

My tender helps in thee.—I must be gone,
 My ever faithful, and my gallant friend.—
 I pr'ythee leave this woman's work.—Farewel—
 Take this last, dear embrace.—Farewel for ever!

Soub. My bursting breast!—I fain would speak, but
 Are poor — Farewel! — [words
 But we shall meet again, embrace in one
 Eternal band, which never shall be loos'd. [Exit.

Effex. To death's concluding stroke, lead on, lieutenant.
 My wife!—Now reason, fortitude, support me;
 For now, indeed, comes on my forest trial.

Enter Countess of Rutland.

Rut. Oh, thou last, dear reserve of fortune's malice!
 For fate can add no more—Oh, com' st thou then
 In this dread hour, when all my straining thoughts
 Are struggling in the tenderest ties of nature!
 Oh, com' st thou now t' arrest my parting soul,
 And force it back to life!

Rut. Thou sole delight,
 Thou only joy which life cou'd ever give,
 Or death deprive me of; my wedded lord;
 I come, with thee determin'd to endure
 The utmost rigour of our angry stars;
 To join thee, fearless, in the grasp of death,
 And seek some dwelling in a world beyond it.

Effex. Too much, thou partner of this dismal hour,
 Thy gen'reous soul would prompt thee to endure;
 Nor can thy tender, trembling heart sustain it.
 Long years of bliss remain in store for thee;
 And smiling Time his treasures shall unfold
 To bribe thy stay.

Rut. Thou cruel comforter!
 Alas! what's life, what's hated life to me?
 ‘ Can aught beneath this starry hemisphere,
 ‘ Which earth's extent, and nature's wealth can yield,
 ‘ Which proud ambition stretches to enjoy,
 ‘ Or passion pants for, recompense thy los’?
 Alas! this universe, this goodly frame,
 Shall all as one continued curse appear,
 And every object blast, when thou art gone.

Effex. Oh, strain not thus the little strength I've left,
 The weak support that holds up life, to bear

A few short moments more, its weight of woe,
 Its loss of thee. Oh, turn away those eyes,
 Nor with that look melt down my fix'd resolve ;
 And yet a little longer let me gaze
 On that lov'd form. Alas ! I feel my sight
 Grows dim, and reason from her throne retires ;
 For pity's sake, let go my breaking heart,
 And leave me to my fate.

Rut. Why wilt thou still
 Of parting talk, since life its thousand gates
 Unbars to let us through together ? ‘ Death
 ‘ Is but a step that reaches to eternity.’
 Oh, that the friendly hand of Heav'n wou'd snatch
 Us both at once, above the distant stars,
 Where fortune's venom'd shafts can never pierce,
 Nor cruel queens destroy !—‘ Nay, look not so.’

Essex. The awful searcher, whose impartial eye
 Explores the secrets of each human heart,
 And every thought surveys, can witness for me,
 How close thy image clings around my soul :
 Retards each rising wish, and draws me back
 To life, entangled by that lov'd idea.
 When fell necessity those ties shall break,
 For quickly break they must—when I from earth
 On faith's white angel wings to heaven shall soar,
 Thy lasting form shall still my mind possess,
 Where bliſs supreme each faculty o'erwhelms,
 And raptur'd angels glow.

Lieu. My lord, ‘ the time
 ‘ Too far is stretch'd ;’ it now grows late.

Essex. Lead on.

Rut. Stay, stay, my love ! my dearest, dying lord !
 Ah, whither wouldst thou go ? Ah, do not leave me !
 Alas ! I'll hasten to attend your flight ;
 And nature gives consent we should not part.
 I feel each faculty for fate prepare,
 And my quick soul wou'd fain set out before you.
 ‘ Oh, precious pangs !—Oh, dear distress !—still closer
 ‘ To thy quick throbbing heart let mine complain,
 ‘ And on thy labouring bosom breathe my laſt.’ [Faints.]

Essex. Thou sinking excellence ! thou matchless wo-
 Shall fortune rob me of thy dear embrace, [man !
 Or

Or earth's whole power, or death divide us now !
Stay, stay, thou spotless, injur'd saint, and take—

Lieut. My lord, already you have been indulg'd
Beyond what I can warrant by my orders.

Essex. Oh, let me on her dying bosom fall,
Embrace her spotless form.—One moment more
Afford me to my sorrows.—Oh, look there !
Cou'd bitter anguish pierce your heart, like mine,
You'd pity now the mortal pangs I feel,
The throbs that tear my vital strings away,
And rend my agorizing soul.—

Lieut. My lord—

Essex. But one short moment, and I will attend.
Ye sacred ministers that virtue guard,
And shield the righteous in the paths of peril,
Restore her back to life, and lengthen'd years
Of joy ; dry up her bleeding sorrows all :
Oh, cancel from her thoughts this dismal hour,
And blot my image from her sad remembrance.
'Tis done.—

And now, ye trembling cords of life, give way :
Nature and time, let go your hold ; eternity
Demands me.

[Exeunt Essex and Lieutenant.]

Woman. She returns to life, see ! help !

Rut. Where has my lost, benighted soul been wand'ring ?
What means this mist that hangs about my mind ?
Through which reflection's painful eye discerns
Imperfect forms, and horrid shapes of woe.
The cloud dispels, the shades withdraw, and all
My dreadful fate appears.—Oh, where's my lord,
My life ! my Essex ! Oh, whither have they ta'en him ?

[Enter Queen and Attendants.]

Q. To execution ! Fly with lightning's wing,
And save him. ‘ Hah ! by whose command was this ?
‘ Stop, stop the fatal blow.—My fears were true.’

[Exit one of the attendants.]

Rut. Thou saving angel, sent from Heav'n ! my queen,
My gracious queen, ‘ be quick ! —the bloody Burleigh !
‘ A moment may destroy him. Stretch thy arm,
‘ Defend, defend,’ O, snatch him from the blow !
Preserve my husband ! ‘ O, Elizabeth,

50 THE EARL OF ESSEX.

' Look down upon me. Angels move her heart,
 ' To pity; save him, save him, gracious queen.'
 Q. Be calm, he shall not die. Rise up. I came
 To save his life.

Rut. 'Tis mercy's voice that speaks.

My Essex shall again be mine. My queen,
 My bounteous, gracious queen, has said the word.
 May troops of angels guard thy sacred life,
 And, in thy latest moments, waft thy soul
 To meet that mercy, in the realms of joy,
 Which now thy royal goodness grants to me.

Enter Burleigh.

Bur. Madam, your orders came, alas! too late.
 Ere they arriv'd the axe had fallen on Essex.

Rut. Ha! dead! What hell is this that opens round me?
 What fiend art thou that draws the horrid scene?
 Ah, Burleigh! bloody murd'rer, where's my husband?
 ' Oh, where's my lord, my Essex?'
 Destruction seize and madness rend my brain.
 See, see, they bend him to the fatal block;
 Now, now the horrid axe is lifted high,
 It falls, it falls; he bleeds, he bleeds; he dies!

Q. Alas, her sorrows pierce my suffering heart.

Rut. Eternal discord, tear the social world.
 ' And nature's laws dissolve! expunge, erase
 ' The hated marks of time's engraving hand,
 ' And every trace destroy!' Arise, despair,
 ' Assert thy rightful claim,' possest me all!
 Bear, bear me to my murder'd lord, to clasp
 His bleeding body in my dying arms,
 And in the tomb embrace his dear remains,
 And mingle with his dust for ever. [Exit.

Q. Hapless woman!

She shall henceforth be partner of my sorrows;
 And we'll contend who most shall weep for Essex.
 Oh, quick to kill, and ready to destroy, [To Burleigh.
 Cou'd no pretext be found, no cause appear,
 To lengthen mercy out a moment more,
 And stretch the span of grace? Oh, cruel Burleigh!
 This, this was thy dark work, unpitying man!

Bur. My gracious mistress, blame not thus my duty,
 My firm obedience to your high command.

The laws condemn'd him first to die; nor think
I stood between your mercy and his life.
It was the lady Nottingham, not I.
Herself confess'd it all, in wild despair,
That from your majesty to Essex sent,
With terms of proffer'd grace, she then receiv'd
From his own hand a fatal ring, a pledge
It seem'd of much importance, which the earl
With earnest suit, and warm entreaty, begg'd her,
As she would prize his life, to give your majesty.
In this she fail'd—In this she murder'd Essex!

Q. Oh, barbarous woman!
Surrounded still by treachery and fraud!
‘ What bloody deed is this? Thou injur'd Essex?’
My fame is foil'd to all succeeding times:
But Heav'n alone can view my breaking heart;
Then let its will be done.—

From hence, let proud, resisting mortals know
The arm parental, and th' indulgent blow.
To Heaven's corrective rod, submissive bend;
Adore its wisdom, on its power depend;
Whilst ruling justice guides eternal sway,
Let nature tremble, and let man obey.

END of the FIFTH ACT.

E P I L O G U E.

By an unknown hand.

Spoken originally by Mrs. CIBBER.

NEIVS! News! good folks, rare news, and you shall
I've got intelligence about our poet? [know it.—
Who do you think he is?—You'll never guess;
An Irish Bricklayer, neither more or less.
And now the secret's out, you cannot wonder,
That in commencing bard he made a blunder.
Has he not left the better for the worse,
In quitting solid brick for empty verse?
Can he believe th' example of Old Ben,
Who chang'd, like him, the trowel for the pen,
Will in his favour move your critic bowels?
You rather wish, most poet's pens were trowels.
One man is honest, sensible, and plain,
Nor has the poet made him pert, or vain:
No beau, no courtier, nor conceited youth;
But then so rude, he always speaks the truth;
I told him he must flatter, learn address,
And gain the heart of some rich patroness:
'Tis she, said I, your labours will reward,
If you but join the bricklay'r with the bard;
As thus——Should she be old and worse for wear,
You must new-case her, front her and repair;
If crack'd in fame, as scarce to bear a touch,
You cannot use your trowel then too much;
In short, whate'er her morals, age or station,
Plaster and white-wash in your dedication.
Thus I advis'd—but he detests the plan:
What can be done with such a simple man?
A poet's nothing worth and nought availing,
Unless he'll furnish where there is a failing.
Authors in these good times are made and us'd,
To grant these favours nature has refus'd.
If he won't fib, what bounty can he crave?
We pay for what we want, not what we have.——

Nay,

E P I L O G U E.

Nay, though of every blessing we have store,
Our sex will always wish — a little more. —
If he'll not bend his heart to this his duty,
And sell, to who will buy, wit, honour, beauty;
The bricklay'r still for him the proper trade is,
Too rough to deal with gentlemen and ladies. —
In short — they'll all avoid him, and neglect him,
Unless that you, his patrons, will protect him.
